LONDON PROGRAMME:

ENGLISH LAW FOR INTERNATIONAL COMMERCIAL PRACTICE

English law governs a large proportion of international contracts, corporate transactions, and dispute resolution clauses. Civil law trained lawyers are therefore frequently required to advise on English law issues that directly affect deal structure, risk allocation, enforceability, and business outcomes. However, assumptions that are valid in civil law systems often do not apply under English law, and misunderstanding these differences can expose clients to significant legal and commercial risk.

This 5 day intensive programme provides a practical and integrated understanding of how English law operates in real business contexts. It focuses on the areas that most commonly affect cross border transactions and disputes, including contract formation and interpretation, remedies for breach, dispute resolution strategy, corporate restructuring, and the growing importance of intellectual property as a business asset.
